

NATIONAL ARCHIVES AMERICA EATS SERIES:
FOOD FRIGHTS! FOOD SAFETY THEN AND NOW

NBC'S "MEET THE PRESS" DAVID GREGORY MODERATES PANEL DISCUSSION:
PHILIP DERFLER, USDA/FSIS; SUZANNE JUNOD, FDA; CAROLINE SMITH DEWAAL, CSPI; AND CHEF JOSÉ ANDRÉS

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 27, 2011
7 P.M., THEATER DOORS OPEN AT 6:30 P.M.

WILLIAM G. MCGOWAN THEATER, NATIONAL ARCHIVES, WASHINGTON DC

WHAT: National Archives America Eats Series: Food Frights! Food Safety Then and Now. Ever hear of the "Poison Squad" or read author Upton Sinclair's exposé of the meat packing industry? How did America's government become involved in the food safety of its citizens? A panel explores how this involvement started, how far we have come, and how it will look in the future. David Gregory of NBC's "Meet the Press," is the moderator for the panel discussion. The National Archives presents a special series of programs—all inspired by the new What's Cooking, Uncle Sam? exhibition.

WHO: David Gregory of NBC's "Meet the Press," moderates panelists:

- Philip Derfler, USDA/FSIS Deputy Administrator
- Suzanne Junod, FDA senior historian
- Caroline Smith DeWaal, Director of the Food Safety Program, Center for Science in the Public Interest
- Chef José Andrés, Chief Culinary Advisor for the "What's Cooking, Uncle Sam?" exhibit at the National Archives

TICKETS: Admission free. Seating is on a first-come, first-served basis. The doors to the McGowan Theater will open 30 minutes prior to the start of the program. Use the Special Events entrance on Constitution Avenue.

WHEN: Thursday, October 27, 2011
7:00 p.m.
NOTE: Doors Open at 6:30 p.m.

WHERE: William G. McGowan Theater
National Archives, Washington DC
700 Pennsylvania Avenue NW,
(use the special events entrance on the corner of Constitution Avenue and 7th Street)
Washington DC 20408

Metro: Archives Metro Station

CONTACT: National Archives Public Affairs, 202.357.5300
public.affairs@nara.gov/